Perhaps you have heard this: "Gasoline is gasoline—they're all alike." One might as well say that shoes are shoes, soap is soap or tires are tires.

Just what drives that motor in your car?

A MIXTURE of from 12 to 15 parts of air and 1 part of gasoline vapor does it. Motor gasoline has to be volatile, so that it will vaporize readily, but that is not all. The composition of that one part of gasoline vapor largely determines how well the motor performs.

Motor gasoline must be more than just volatile; it should be properly balanced. It must contain the right proportion of light, intermediate and heavy constituents to afford instant ignition, abundant power and full mileage.

"Standard" is a carefully balanced gasoline, which accounts for the consistently good results it is giving in tens of thousands of motors today.

It pays to discriminate in buying gasoline, and oil too. Polarine oils are just as dependable as "Standard" Motor Gasoline. Don't take oil without knowing its name.
